Indiana Association for Infant and Toddler Mental Health
IMH Institute – Program Description

Day 1 (July 9, 2007) - Mental Health Diagnosis in Young Children with Janice Katz, PhD and CANS 0-5 with Stacey Ryan, LCSW

Presentation focused on Indiana efforts related to IMH including the DC 0-3R Crosswalk covering diagnostic criteria for infants and toddlers and its relationship to other existing classification systems, and the Indiana 0-5 CANS. This program will be available for up to 125 participants.

Recommended Participants:

Mental Health Professionals
Child Protection Supervisors
Child Protection Trainers
Child Care Professionals and Trainers
Early Childhood mental health providers

Days 2 and 3 (July 10-11, 2007) - Interaction Guidance (IG): Dyadic Treatment for High Risk Families with Susan McDonough, PhD

IG is an evidence-based approach to supporting high risk families created and researched by Susan McDonough, PhD, University of Michigan. The process has been effective for families who have failed in other treatment modalities. IG uses a structured format based on systems theory along with infant mental health concepts. Videotape is used to support change in parent-child interactions. Dr. McDonough is presently conducting clinical trials supported by NIH on the IG approach. Each participant will receive a copy of Treating Parent-Infant Relationship Problems as a text for this workshop co-authored by presenter Susan McDonough. This program will be available for up to 75 participants.

Recommended Participants:

Mental Health Professionals
University Program Faculty
Early Childhood mental health providers

Days 4 and 5 (July 12-13, 2007) - Dialectical Behavior Therapy (DBT) for High Risk Parents with Janet Dean, LCSW

DBT is an evidence-based treatment for individuals with personality problems, characterized by low reflective functioning, difficulty with self-regulation, and reduced tolerance for stress. When children are parented by individuals with these characteristics and behaviors, insecure attachments are likely. Janet Dean, LCSW, Clinical Director, Community Infant Program, Boulder, Colorado, has been using DBT training with her staff for 5 years. Their experience has been that DBT techniques improve practitioners' skills with these parents, resulting in changes to the parent-child relationship. Each participant will receive a copy of Early Intervention with Multi-Risk Families as a text for this workshop. This program will be available for up to 75 participants.

Recommended Participants:

Mental Health Professionals
Child Protection Supervisors
Early Childhood mental health providers
